Boutique Hotels in Los Angeles, CA

If you want to get noticed in Los Angeles you have to be a stand out among the crowd. L.A.'s boutique hotels are certainly garnering attention and, at the same time, turning the heads of savvy travelers. Uncommonly hip, surprisingly secluded and amenity-rich, these little-known gems could easily be the reason the do not disturb sign was ever invented.

Located on a swatch of shoreline known as “Billionaire’s Beach,” this stylish retreat, owned by music mogul David Geffen, features just 47 beach chic rooms and suites all with private balconies and breathtaking ocean views. Arriving guests shift into “Malibu mode” as soon as they lay eyes on their very own private beach. There is also seaside dining on the terrace at Carbon Beach Club and soothing spa services provided onsite at Cure Spa. Location is everything, and this hideaway is just minutes from the Getty Villa, Pepperdine University, and five-star sushi grazing at celebrity-laden Nobu. Even if you’re not part of the Billionaires Boy (and Girls) Club, you will certainly feel like you are – at least until it’s time to check out.
